Edgeworth staff prepares for summer renovation

By Rachel Weaver

Staff writer

With warmer weather lending itself to more construction-friendly days, the Edgeworth Elementary staff is getting ready for some serious spring cleaning.

Edgeworth is the first of Quaker Valley School District's two elementary schools to be renovated. The building will close when classes end next month and remain closed for the 2005-06 school year. It will then reopen for the 2006-07 school year.

The latest construction newsletter released Friday reports the district is in the process of creating and refining its packing and moving procedure. Boxes have been delivered to the schools and teachers are packing. Movers will start making runs this month.

On the future construction site, stone has been brought in to keep dirt and mud to a minimum, and nearby roads have been inspected for pre-construction conditions.

The old preschool building is being removed, as is the remaining Mansard roof. Once the preschool is gone, workers will dig 70 feet down for the foundation of the new building addition.

Five construction trailers are on the site and contractors are submitting samples of the surfaces to be used in the new building.

All trees to be saved are protected by orange fencing. Early next week, the butterfly garden will be dismantled.

Because students are taking PSSA tests this week, no construction will take place.

PART 3 - FUNDING THE FUTURE

SVH committee dedicated to developing a dream

By Rachel Weaver

Staff writer

For many people, facing a major renovation isn't much fun.

Working out plans, dealing with inconveniences and, worst of all, handling the costs can be stressful to anyone attempting an upgrade.

But when faced with footing half of an $8 million renovation bill, avoiding the dollar signs is not an option.

A committee made up of local volunteers is dedicated to the task. Members of the Sewickley Valley Hospital Foundation Emergency Department Campaign Steering Committee are more than halfway finished raising the funds necessary to bring the department to the forefront of technology.

The goal

When plans for the ED renovation were announced last year, members of the SVH Foundation board, dedicated to raising funds for the facility, pledged to supply $4 million for the new department with the rest coming from hospital operations, capital reserves and financing activities, said Martha Oakey, SVHF executive director.

The complete redesign will occupy more than 22,300 square feet, compared to the current space of 8,830 square feet.

The ED was built in 1975 to service 22,000 patients each year. Today, it cares for more than 37,000 annually. It is estimated that will grow to 45,000 in the next five years.

With patient comfort, privacy and safety in mind, plans for the new department include the addition of individual beds, digital bed boards and a new separate psychiatric unit.

To incorporate the latest technology, the entire department will be wireless, with each physician and nurse documenting and accessing records digitally.

Also, the new ED waiting area will include a pediatric section called Austin's Playroom, a project of the Mario Lemieux Foundation designed when his wife, Nathalie, was frustrated by the lack of a place for her child to play while her husband received treatment.

The 10-person campaign committee is ensuring funds are available to make plans a reality.

Making up the committee are Dr. Thomas Pangburn, director of SVHED; George Davidson, SVHF board member; Barbara Barry, area resident and volunteer; Donald Spalding, past CEO of Sewickley Valley

Hospital and SVHF chair; Laura Vassamillet, member of the HVHS and SVHF boards; Marvin Wedeen, SVHF board member; Dr. Dan Nadler, past SVHF chair; Dr. Richard Cassoff and Dr. Gary Smith, SVH physicians; and Scott Elste, area resident and volunteer.

"If you need us, we need to be there for you. If you experience chest pains, your first thought is to come to the emergency room and nowhere else," said Nadler.

"Our hospital has been here a long time and has always had the support of the community. Now, more than ever, we need your support and rely on your generosity."

Faced with the monumental task, committee members tackled the project one source at a time.

The method

To get a feel of the community's level of support for the project, committee members interviewed 65 area residents and employees from all walks of life.

The response was positive.

"People feel really strongly about it. They recognize the emergency department as an asset," says Oakey.

But before the public had a chance to donate, the committee conducted an in-house drive. Donations broke down as follows: SVHF Board of directors — $193,050; Heritage Valley Health System Board — $82,500; Senior management team — $85,903; Operational management team — $67,755; SVH Physicians — $158,500; and employees — $14,778.

Reaching out to other people and organizations in the community led to the following donations: individuals — $606,063; foundations — $541,000; corporate/business — $13,000; and one gift-in-kind totaling $16,000.

Including several other gifts, fund-raising has amounted to $2,052,965, or 51.3 percent of the committee's goal. Oakey says that puts the committee right on track.

Those who donate larger amounts are given the opportunity to have one of 20 treatment and specialty rooms permanently named after them.

Gifts ranging from $1,000 to $4,999 are rewarded by donors' names being added to a tribute wall in the ED.

Any gift exceeding $5,000 earns the person a commemorative plaque along a donor wall.

Oakey says plaques either will be mounted on tile or brick, depending on architects' final designs.

After the SVHF fund-raiser, "A Toast to your Health," being held April 16 at the Pittsburgh Airport Hyatt Regency, a public outreach campaign will begin, during which committee members will appeal to all area residents and give them the opportunity to give.

They plan a telethon and have been educating the public during small informational seminars held at people's homes.

Anyone interested in donating to the emergency department campaign can send checks of any amount to the Sewickley Valley Hospital Foundation, 720 Blackburn Road, Sewickley, PA 15143. Attention: ED renovation or give on-line at www.heritagevalley.org.

If you're going

"A Toast to your Health," will be held Saturday, April 16, at the Pittsburgh Airport Hyatt Regency, hosted by Alex Sebastian of the Wooden Angel.

This premier bi-ennial charity event offers tasting of premium wines, micro-beers and gourmet foods prepared by recognized international and area chefs and specialty wines vendors.

A silent wine auction will be held throughout the evening featuring bottles of premium wine and more.

Tickets are $100 per person. Reservations can be made by calling 412-749-7121 or 724-728-9111.

Clapper takes new job as North Hills superintendent

By Rachel Weaver

Staff writer

Last week Dr. Joseph Clapper sent out a mass e-mail to his Quaker Valley co-workers informing them of his upcoming departure to become superintendent of North Hills School District.

QUAKER VALLEY

The next day, his inbox had more than 120 responses from the co-workers and friends with whom he's spent the last 12 years, each one lamenting the loss of this seasoned educator.

Though he never anticipated his upcoming career move, Clapper always wanted to be a teacher.

As a child, he was influenced by his educator uncle and his father, who served on a central Pennsylvania school board for 20 years. With his father's experience, Clapper was raised with a behind-the-scenes look at education administration.

He went on to earn bachelor's degrees in elementary education and English, as well as a master's degree in educational administration from Shippensburg University.

He completed his doctorate in curriculum and instruction at Penn State University.

DR. JOSEPH Clapper, after 12 years at Quaker Valley, will take on his new role as superintendent of North Hills School District on July 1.

Early in his career, Clapper worked as an assistant professor of education at Lebanon Valley College and an instructor at Penn State University.

Joining QV's administrative staff in 1993, he served as an elementary principal until 2000 when he was promoted to assistant superintendent.

Reflecting on his time at QV, Clapper is most proud of Edgeworth Elementary being named a National Blue Ribbon School in 1999 during his time as principal.

"It's a real honor for any school to earn that status. To go to Washington, D.C., and meet people from other Blue Ribbon Schools and the president of the United States was a tremendous experience," he says.

As assistant superintendent, Clapper's responsibilities range from finance to curriculum, strategic planning, special education and technology.

"I've really been blessed that Dr. (R. Gerard) Longo (QV superintendent) has given me the opportunities to learn and grow and experience. I've always been willing to tackle anything and learn from it."

His eager attitude is just one of the characteristics that made Clapper stand out when Longo considered potential assistants.

"He likes kids — that's always at the top of the list. And he's able to work with all manner of people," says Longo.

Clapper believes the main advantage of having worn many professional hats in a smaller district is the ability to experience just about everything firsthand.

A few short steps helps to feed the hungry

By Dona S. Dreeland

Editor

A few hours of physical exercise may not be a cure-all, but it sure can calm a restless spirit trapped in a bout of spring fever.

Coming up on Sunday, April 17, is an opportunity to combine some old-fashioned strolling with far-reaching goodwill during the CROP Walk for World Hunger, sponsored by the Sewickley and Ambridge ministeriums.

In its second year, (the first walk having been held in 2003), this event is planned to raise consciousness about the needs of the hungry in Third World countries — and in our own neighborhoods.

Rabbi Shoshana Kaminsky of Beth Samuel Jewish Center and the Rev. Barry Lewis of Sewickley United Methodist Church are co-chairs of this walking tour, which will benefit Church World Service, an international group that has sponsored world-wide walks since 1947.

The local effort, called the "Five Boros Walk," will begin at Osborne Elementary School and end at the Center for Hope in Ambridge, almost four miles later.

Area congregations are invited to join those from St. Paul's Lutheran, St. Andrew's Presbyterian and The Presbyterian Church, Sewickley, and Leetsdale Presbyterian, which have already committed their support. Individuals, families and organizations are also welcome to participate.

The 2003 effort here raised about $2,500 from the 50 walkers who made commitments. The co-chairs are hoping for greater attendance and the possibility this event will bring residents to their feet every spring.

While benefits of the pledges-per-kilometer are felt abroad, they will be brought home with 25 percent of what is raised being donated to local food pantries — Sewickley Community Center's Food Pantry and the Center for Hope Food Pantry.

Even in our own communities, there are families who struggle to take care of this most basic of needs.

It is for them and to honor another great example of community care that the Herald staff will contribute a few hours and lots of legwork to the cause.

We three — Rachel, Jon and I — will walk because we can.

We'll join the crowd on Sunday, April 17, and finish the footrace with pledges — $1 per kilometer for each of the 10K — in hand.

We'd love to see you there, too.

For pledge sheets, call the Rev. Barry Lewis at 412-741-9430.

Clapper takes on leadership at NH

"When someone comes to talk to me about an issue, I've probably experienced it at some point. In a larger system, I would not have had those diverse experiences."

"If you're going to sit in that (superintendent) seat, it's very beneficial to have multi-faceted experiences. Dr. Longo is fond of saying that the road to becoming superintendent goes through the principal's office."

"You have to really understand the nuts and bolts of education. You would have shortcomings if you had not been a building principal."

Clapper will join the North Hills staff on July 1, but he has no plans of making a grand entrance.

"I've learned that when you're entering a new position, it's best to not go in with guns a blazin'. I don't believe in change for the sake of change."

He plans to spend his first year learning about the culture of the North Hills district, which is more than double the size of QV. However, Clapper doesn't see size as a challenge.

"I don't think about the size. I think about the people. There are 350 teachers at North Hills. QV has 160. It will take a while to learn all the players."

Clapper's departure from

QV is not final, as his wife, Christy, is a QV guidance counselor and his daughter, Laura, is a sophomore at the high school.

"She has mixed loyalties," he says, of his wife. "She's very fond of Quaker Valley, but she realizes this is a real opportunity. It's bittersweet."

Longo likens Clapper leaving to losing his right hand, but the superintendent always knew his assistant's career path would lead him to his new position.

"He's honed his skills in the past five years. I knew he'd become a superintendent. He was destined for that," said Longo.

Sewickley resident wins contest with photo of littered yard

By Rachel Weaver

Staff writer

When Dorothy Moore saw an article in her morning newspaper calling for photographs of litter, she knew right away what she would shoot.

Her mind wandered to a house she had seen many times but never understood.

Tucked away on an isolated road in Somerset County, a home has a front yard cluttered with litter stretching as far as the side of the road.

Moore knew it was perfect for Lens on Litter, a contest run by the Pittsburgh Resource Council in attempts to show how litter spoils country-sides, towns and streets.

"It's not your typical kind of litter picture. People actually live there. It's a shame because Somerset County is so beautiful," she says.

Her hunch was correct and late last month she was named as one of the contest's four $200 prize-winners for her piece entitled "Littering a Landmark," named for the fact that the house was once a country school.

Moore frequents the mountainous Somerset area as she and her husband have a summer home there and her son,

THIS SOMERSET site was the subject of a prize-winning photo for Dorothy Moore in the Lens on Litter contest.

Dennison, resides there on his grandfather's old farm.

When Moore received a letter telling her she'd won, it took her a minute to realize what it meant, as she had long forgotten about her submission.

"I nearly flipped. I thought, 'Oh my gosh. I've never won anything.' I'm not lucky," she says with a laugh.

While photography is not one of Moore's hobbies, she considers documentation a favorite pastime.

She volunteers as an archivist for the Sewickley Valley Historical Society, of which she is a founding member.

Years ago, Moore began clipping obituaries and other pertinent information about local families from newspapers. She did all the filing and has served as a resource for anyone with a question about any Sewickley family.

"I can usually find at least one clue that leads them in the right direction," she says.

More than 100 entries were received in this contest. The $1,000 first place prize went to a Greensburg woman.

Woman of the Year makes public education her passion

By Dona S. Dreeand

Editor

Education and politics. The combination can be volatile or static. Yet the two might strike a balance if conditions are right.

Joan Murdoch, president of Quaker Valley School Board, finds the challenge of making the two systems more compatible invigorating.

"One thing about the school board is that the work is never 'done.' There are always new challenges and new things to learn — state standards, No Child Left Behind, construction, bond issues, Act 72, falling hillsides I love the learning and the problem solving."

Long before she ran for the board and won in 1996, the quest for quality in education found her.

She and her husband David moved to the district from Ben Avon in 1983. Overnight, she remembers, the school board there, where David had served, changed completely. Fiscal concerns brought the change: Enrollment in the kindergarten class grew to 35 students.

Their three children — Christina, Timothy and Deborah — needed more.

"We moved here because we knew how important a good district is to people and how fragile a good school system is."

It wasn't long after that Joan found herself seeking ways to participate in the educational life of her children — "Art in Motion" brought works of art and stories of their creators into classrooms; the Home and School Association at Edgeworth Elementary worked diligently to support its teachers; Friends of Sewickley Public Library took shape to sustain the mission that still invites all residents to become life-long learners.

"People ask me 'Why do you do this?' It's not just about my kids. (All now are in their 20s, college graduates and advancing in study and careers). 'Public education is an important value for me.'"

That value came from her upbringing in Madison, Wis.

There was never any question she would attend the University of Wisconsin. Her grandfather held a place on its board of regents. Her parents knew the reputation of this international school firsthand.

As the oldest of five girls, Joan enrolled, intent on a degree in political science and active in the work of her sorority.

She studied, contributed to campus life and upheld the family tradition where public service was expected. Her father had served as state senator and later as Chief Justice of the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

WITH LAPTOP, briefs and packets, Joan Murdoch prepares herself to participate in each Quaker Valley School Board meeting.

She remembers his campaigns, his long hours and sacrifice as a lawyer and legislator. His expectation for his life and for those of his children was that one gives back to the community.

His idealism had its impact; after graduation, Joan found a place at Duquesne University as program director for the student union. She found college-age students bright and lively.

From Duquesne, she moved on as assistant dean of student affairs at Penn State's Beaver Campus, where she earned a master's degree in higher education administration, and then to assistant dean of community services at Community College of Allegheny County-North Campus.

The fledgling institution found its wings inside a trailer parked at Passavant Hospital in the 1970s. She helped set its course as a member of a six-person team, developing programs, writing grants, supervising and evaluating staff.

"I have a heart for the CCAC mission," she says. "They accept people as they are and work with them. They offer an affordable option for those who might not be able to go elsewhere."

Her early work there was honored with an invitation to the groundbreaking ceremony at the old Hills' retail space. She is proud to have launched a new center of learning.

As her children grew, she recognized their need to succeed with each report card and their differences in learning styles.

She also recognized the importance of quality and vision in those who direct educational programs — teachers, administrators and school boards.

"The vision here is in line with what the world needs," she says. "The bar has to be higher for all students, especially the middle student. The skills needed for the 21st century are different from those of the past."

Vision begins with the superintendent. Having been involved in QV's Strategic Plan I and II, a touchstone for the district, she appreciates Dr. R. Gerard Longo's "relentless pursuit of excellence."

"A really good school district," she says, "gives attention to quality system-wide. Schools have to keep getting better for the kids and for the community. They're a key asset to making the community what it is."

And the role of education in democracy, Joan says, has been in stronger focus since 9-11 and in terms of the global economy.

"Education shouldn't be measured by seat-time but by what you can do and what you know."

That directive is carried out by dedicated teachers; supportive parents around the table when homework is done; a school board committed to the most significant work of training a new generation of productive, responsible citizens; and a community that recognizes the importance of education for all of its children.

"Our board members bring a lot in specific areas of expertise. We have a commitment to public education and to the belief that all kids can learn."

As board president, she works to keep information flowing among the administration and the directors.

Through this unusual and difficult budget year, she and the board have worked through the dollars and sense of education, learning more about the process as they go.

It is still frustrating to her how little funding comes from the state to support the day-to-day operations. The $550 allotment for basic education per student puts a burden on local taxpayers. Special education funds also are inadequate to the task.

"I hate going to Harrisburg," she says. "I hate the drive."

Yet she is grateful for the relationships she's established with Sen. John Pippy, Rep. Mark Mustio and new legislator Rep. Sean Ramaley.

Through a fellowship to the Education & Policy Leadership Program, held each month in the state capital during 2000-01, she has met other key people and learned a lot.

"At least they know who we are."

Quaker Valley's prominence in the Digital School District grant competition also gave the district visibility.

But high-tech advancements, new facilities and curriculum changes mean the most when quality teachers are hired and retained.

"When you get down to it, it's the teachers."

In recent years, education's focus has turned to how children learn, so teachers can differentiate instruction whether visual, audio or tactile.

"This is a different world. It's global and we can't stop it."

Even jobs for lesser-skilled people in the world aren't the same. Craftsmen and service personnel will need higher levels of understanding to be productive and successful.

That success, she knows, is achieved one student, one teacher at a time.

"Good enough" isn't an option for me or for our kids. Kids need to maximize their potential."

Progress begins with encouragement and a vision of possibility.

For Joan, family and faith have had their inspiration. Friends and colleagues have loaned support to her efforts. And neighbors, district-wide, have added their influence.

"This community has been blessed by people who really care about kids."

It's a blessing she is grateful to have shared and to pass along.

Honors Dinner set for Friday, April 29

There's nothing more heartwarming than a salute to the very best the community has to offer.

This year's Sewickley Herald Honors Dinner is planned for Friday, April 29, at the Edgeworth Club.

All are invited to join us as we honor Joan Murdoch, John Hayes and Harton Semple Jr. as Woman, Man and Citizen of the Year for 2004, respectively.

In this, the 29th year of a grand tradition, we will applaud our honorees for the many contributions they have made to our collective lives here.

• Murdoch, who now serves as president of the Quaker Valley School Board, has dedicated her life to the betterment of education in our public schools.

She has served the district well as an advocate for the children, a sounding board for parents and a representative of the needs of Quaker Valley at the state level.

• In addition to decades as a business leader,

Hayes has engaged his experience and ideals in the work of the regional Visioning Study. As co-chair of the group, he has worked unselfishly to establish a model of community cooperation.

• As Citizen of the Year, Semple is being honored for his efforts on behalf of the Citizens for Soldiers campaign, which will place a new monument in Sewickley Cemetery commemorating those who have died in war.

Make your reservations by calling 412-388-5804. Let us know how many will be attending and whom you will be honoring.

Dinner is $30 per person. Checks can be made payable to Herald Honors Dinner and mailed to — Sewickley Herald, 1964 Greentree Road, Pittsburgh PA. 15220.

Over the years, hundreds have come together to honor our friends and neighbors and keep the Herald tradition.

Won't you join us?

HERALD HONORS

Man of the Year works to better municipal services

By Rachel Weaver

Staff writer

Like most people, Marion Hayes does not care to discuss potential cross-community watershed use at the dinner table.

But with a husband dedicated to improving just about every municipal service, it does come up from time to time.

John Hayes, president of Osborne Borough Council and co-chair of the Quaker Valley Visioning Study steering committee, is the Sewickley Herald's 2004 Man of the Year.

Born in England, Hayes served in the Royal Airforce during World War II for five years in Italy.

He returned home after the war and attended college, earning a master's degree in business from the University of Birmingham. He later accepted a position with Procter & Gamble as head of market research.

He and Marion married in 1948.

"We had our 50th anniversary some time back and as my wife keeps reminding me, our 60th is coming soon," Hayes, says in his charming English accent.

He worked at Procter & Gamble for 12 years doing door-to-door interviews before being transferred to France where he lived for four years. The couple's two children, Janet and Peter, were schooled there while the family lived in a "delightful old house" in the center of Paris.

Soon Hayes was offered a job as general manager of H.J. Heinz-Pittsburgh. Ambivalent about the move, Hayes told Marion who replied with a sigh, saying, "Pittsburgh after Paris?"

Hayes spent 12 years at H.J. Heinz working with industry and grocery projects. In 1969, he chaired the industry market research committee, which worked with the U.S. Department of Agriculture to develop the first U.S. Business Census of the Foodservice Industry.

From 1973 to 1975, he worked for the grocery industry Ad Hoc Committee in Washington, D.C. to oversee the introduction of the Universal Product Code, after helping to select the original symbol.

While working on the UPC, Hayes realized many companies weren't conducting adequate market research. Inspired by a desire to provide the service, he started his company, Hayes, Nedved and Associates, which provides companies with feedback from customers done mostly by phone interview. The company has branch offices in Los Angeles and McKeesport and clients in the States, Canada, Great Britain and Germany.

And at 82, he has no intentions of retiring.

"It gets me out of the house and off the streets. I probably should have retired years ago, but nobody asked me to."

Before moving to Osborne Borough 18 years ago, the Hayes family lived in a "bigish" Sewickley home. They moved to a smaller home when upkeep became overwhelming. Without a yard to maintain, Hayes found himself with ample free time, which he wanted to devote to public service.

He mentioned his interest to his neighbor, the late Mayor Max Schoetz, who told him the borough needed an auditor. To Hayes' surprise, he ran for the six-year position unopposed.

Because of his business sense, Hayes was named chief auditor and began overseeing the borough's manual accounting system.

When it came time to run again, Hayes opted instead to run for council with hopes of modernizing the auditing system. He was elected to serve as the finance chair and soon, the entire system was computerized.

William Boswell, Osborne Borough mayor, was council president when Hayes first came on board and believes his attention to the budget made and keeps the borough financially sound.

Hayes later succeeded Boswell as council president and is running to fill his seat once again in the 2005 election.

"I'll keel over one day and they'll have to wheel me out," he says.

Hayes says the success of Osborne Council is based on the fact that he "harasses everyone."

"The key is to find good people and then persuade them to use their talents fully. We are so blessed that it worked that way and we managed to find the right people."

Others know it can be attributed to Hayes' refined leadership sense.

"He's detail-oriented, which normally drives me up a wall. But he does it in such a way that he throws things out for the purpose of discussion without getting wrapped up in the details," says Boswell.

In 1999, Hayes became involved with a small group of citizens, calling themselves the 741+ group, and their idea to examine municipal infrastructure when he joined them working on the Quaker Valley Region Visioning Study.

Hayes jokingly "blames" his involvement with the study on Marvin Wedeen, 741+ member.

"His leadership is very constructive and positive," says Wedeen. "He doesn't have any problem dealing with different kinds of personalities. He always comes up with a third way to solve a problem when there are two opposing positions."

"The fact that Osborne Borough Council continues to respect his judgement and leadership is a benefit to the entire community."

The Visioning Study, conducted by Environmental Planning and Design (EPD), is an analysis of municipal services in Quaker Valley's 11 municipalities.

Enthusiastic about the possible findings, Hayes co-chaired the study's steering committee with Sewickley Borough council president Don Kipke.

"People hear phrases like 'merger of communities' and 'revenue sharing' and they leap into a position of defense. They think it will destroy communities. But it's a better approach to not think in terms of redrawing boundary lines but about getting people to work together," he says.

During Phase One, study consultants collected physical, demographic, fiscal and policy data for the region.

Phase Two focused on eliminating repeated municipal expenditures throughout the Sewickley Valley, including fire, sanitary sewer systems, storm water management and code enforcement.

Findings revealed local fire companies have an oversupply of trucks and an under-supply of volunteers and an analysis of potable water providers revealed competition difficulties caused by limited distribution areas and aging infrastructure.

Furthermore, the study proved inconsistencies in storm water ordinances, created on a watershed basis rather than a municipal basis.

Phase III will focus on infrastructure. Hayes anticipates a strong emphasis on the need for renovating the area's water supply and sewage systems, which the study proved to be problematic as most communities get water from different sources.

"We have plenty of water, but most of it is in the wrong place. We need to make sure we have it in the right place at the right time."

With the last step of the visioning study in the hands of municipal leaders, Hayes is excited to see the developments to come in the next few years.

"Everyone has to have a hobby," he says. "I suppose I get some fun out of it."

He likens his enjoyment from municipal service to an episode of "The A-Team" a television comedy about ex-special forces soldiers.

"The characters got into some terrible situation, but then everything fell together. The guy running the mission said: 'It's nice when good plans come together.' That reward is worth its weight in gold."

APPLAUSE, APPLAUSE

Stevens takes first place with poem

Shirley Stevens, retired Quaker Valley High School English teacher and published poet, took first place in a recent contest sponsored by The Pittsburgh Poetry Society.

Jim Daniels, a poet and fiction writer who is in charge of the creative writing program at Carnegie Mellon University, served as judge.

The poem is based on a story told by her brother about the mine sweepers finding a pot of kimchee.

Near Yonchon

Walk slowly through elephant grass on the mine sweep.

Look down before crossing roads or rice paddies.

When you hear a squeal,
call in the sniffer dogs,
probe with your stick.

One false step and your boot will wake a miniature volcano.

Dig beneath banyan roots.
Curse bless explode
with laughter:

today's find—
one farmer's clay pot of kimchee.

Tonight at supper
only cabbage and red chilies in our mouths, fireworks.

Advance Directives

(April 6, 2005) – The subject of advance directives has been a hot topic in the news as of late. An advance directive is a way to tell people ahead of time how you would like to receive medical care in the event that you need medical attention, but are physically or mentally unable to give instructions about your care.

In Pennsylvania, the law states that competent adults have the right to decide whether to accept, reject or discontinue medical care. No matter how serious the situation, if you do not wish to receive medical treatment, you have the right to have those wishes made known and respected by your healthcare provider.

There may be a situation, however, when a person is unable to make his or her wishes known to the healthcare provider because they are unconscious or too seriously injured to express what type of, if any, medical treatment he or she wishes to receive. One way to avoid this situation is by preparing an advance directive.

In Pennsylvania, there are two types of advance directives: 1) a living will and 2) a durable power of attorney. A living will is a written document that details what life-sustaining medical care you do or do not want if you are unable to tell your doctor yourself. A durable power of attorney for health care is a document that enables you to name another person to make your medical decisions for you if you are unable to do so yourself.

If you would like more information on advance directives, contact your long-term care ombudsman, who can be reached at your local Area Agency on Aging. You can contact the Beaver County Office on Aging at 724-847-2262, or via email at Ag-ing@BCoA.us.

Child Health House Tour planned for May 5-6

YOU'RE INVITED

Welcome Spring in the Village on May 5 and 6 with the 32nd Sewickley House Tour, hosted by the Child Health Association of Sewickley and sponsored by PNC Advisors.

The biennial event will feature five Village homes and one Sewickley Heights home.

A visit to the Sewickley Heights History Center and Fern Hollow Nature Center, located on Glen Mitchell Road, also will be part of this year's tour.

Here, visitors will learn about the lifestyles of local residents during the late 1800s and early 1900s.

Frequently, Pittsburgh industrial and business leaders would have summer homes in Sewickley. These estates have provided historical photographs, memorabilia and artifacts from that era.

At the nature center, Child Health's philanthropic endeavors will be on display. The award-winning "Three Rivers Cookbooks" and other items will be available for purchase.

Samples of the famous ginger snaps from Cookbook I and other recipes from Cookbooks II, III, and IV will be offered.

Tickets for the tour may be purchased online through the new Web site, www.sewickley-housestour.com.

Tickets also are available by phone at 412-741-2593, and at many retail stores throughout the Pittsburgh area.

Tour options

■ The guided bus tour will take place on Thursday, May 5, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

■ The self-guided candlelight tour will be Thursday evening, between 6 and 9 p.m. and costs $25 per person.

All tour sites, with the exception of the Sewickley Height home, will be open for viewing during the evening hours.

The Sewickley Heights home may be seen the next day at no additional cost.

■ The self-guided day tour will take place on Friday, May 6, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and costs $25.

The Sewickley Heights Golf Club and Edgeworth Club will welcome non-members for lunch that day, but reservations are requested.

Some area restaurants will be giving a donation to Child Health for each house tour visitor dining at their restaurant on Thursday evening or Friday during the day.

Weather Report #2

Well, sports fans, I've got another weather report for you (because my last one was dead wrong).

The 'old farmers' (from last week's "Mother Nature may spoil spring sports," where I quoted them as saying cold temps and freezing snow would be "the rule" for early April) let us all down, and had me completely bamboozled.

It was almost 70 degrees and sunny most days!

I feel taken.

The good news: I have plenty of real material this week; however, I feel obliged to write another exciting weather column.

This time I'm staying loser to home and consulting Western Pennsylvania's premier weather source: Joe.

And since the weather looks good, high 50s and 60s as far as he can see (that's my report, and I'm sticking to it so long as there is adequate humidity), I'm not going to beat a dead horse.

Let's talk sports.

There's nothing like driving around Sewickley and watching all the practices kicking off the new seasons, especially on a beautiful spring afternoon. It's invigorating.

As a sports writer, I even get out of my car and take notes.

It's a wonderful life, indeed. Last week I had the pleasure of covering some QV and SA teams.

And as the observant reporter that I claim to be, I noticed a common thread.

These two schools have star power; a slew of talented seniors for whom the name of the game is competition, regardless of the sport.

It's their last chance to contribute to another winning high school season, and they play like they want it bad, which brings to mind another common thread.

They have pride in their schools, and it shows — more pride than the old farmers can claim after providing such an ill-informed weather report.

Tell it like it is, Joe.

GIRL'S LACROSSE

Spring sparks spirited Academy practice

By Jon Paul Creese

Sports editor

Last Wednesday brought the first real taste of spring, along with a hint of what's to come. The temperature rose to well above 60, the sun was shining and the Sewickley Academy Girl's Lacrosse Team took advantage of the situation with an intense practice on the SA field.

The girls were preparing for some out-of-state competition against Good Council, Washington D.C., Thursday, before shooting over to the Philadelphia suburbs for matches against Abington and Mt. St. Joseph Academy.

Eastern Pennsylvania is renowned for its durable and dangerous girl's lacrosse teams, but the Lady Panthers had something for them.

Namely, Marisa Lozano, a Division One recruit, and a couple other tried and tested senior talents, Kate Luneburg and Maggie O'Hara.

Suffering from a senior-shallow roster, the Lady Panthers only other senior this year is Katarina Lackner, the Academy's girl's basketball star, who also signed with a Division One school and is trying her hand at lacrosse for the first time since middle school where she played defense.

"Age-wise we are very young, said veteran head coach Cheryl Ann Lassen, noting the team's only serious obstacle this year. "I would like to do as well as last year. I think we can do it."

Lassen led the Lady Panthers to a 15-7 season last year and the team also won the Applebees/MSN Sports Cup, finishing in first place in Class A schools.

This year, Lassen plans to take the Lady Panthers even further but realizes it will take hard work.

"We're going to have to work really hard to get defensive positioning," she said, adding that they'll need to work

Lady Quakers to make a run for the playoffs in '05 season

By Jon Paul Creese

Sports editor

Quaker Valley Girl's Lacrosse head coach Jessica Garavaglia subscribes to the popular "one team" coaching philosophy; and the Lady Quakers are responding with cohesion.

"They are very unselfish," Garavaglia said of the girls. "They pass the ball. They don't care who scores; they just want to win."

"I'm pushing the team concept this year," said Garavaglia, who was the junior varsity coach for 6 years before taking over as varsity coach this year.

And it is just as well, because with only three seniors, the Lady Quakers will have their hands full this year.

"We're a very young team," she explained. "The rest are underclassmen."

The seniors, who also are captains, are Dimitra Bourgis, on point, low defender Devon Patton and Ali Shorall, attack wing.

Junior Robyn Burrows, attack wing, is a captain as well.

Under their leadership, the team is coming along well, and Garavaglia expects a winning season.

"We are fast ... very fast," she said. "We spend a lot of time conditioning. We can run with anybody."

Ultimately, she says it's about getting to the playoffs.

"That's our No. 1 goal," Garavaglia said. "We just want to be competitive, have fun and have a good season."

Thought for the Week

Couldn't it be said that the oft-repeated question, "What is Life?" can be answered in many different ways. Some anonymous quotes come to mind: Take life as you find it but don't leave it that way... If you find life empty, try putting something into it... Life is not a goblet to be drained, but a measure to be filled...

We especially like this quote: Life is a winding road through the years that are allotted to us. It passes through pleasant valleys and over steep hills. It threads its way through wastelands, too. No one can see far enough ahead along the road to know which he will be required to travel on any given day, but each has within him the strength for the hills and the courage for the wastelands. Only those who childishly insist that all the road must be through pleasant valleys fail. And they fail because they never learn to use the inner strength God gave them for the hills, nor to call upon the inner courage He gave them for the wastelands.

Rabbi initiates Passover workshop for families

The Beth Samuel Jewish Center in Ambridge announces a morning workshop for young children and their parents to learn how to celebrate Passover.

The program, which runs from 10 a.m. to noon on Sunday, April 10, includes several crafts, projects, circle time and a snack.

Following the snack, parents will engage in a higher level of discussion with Beth Samuel Rabbi Shoshana Kaminsky while preschool age children enjoy a special program and younger children have play-time.

This workshop is part of the Training Wheels curriculum, which was developed by the Jewish Women's organization Hadassah. It is a family education program, meaning that parents and children learn together. Along with the weekly celebration of the Sabbath, Passover is one of the most family-oriented of all Jewish holidays.

"Passover offers a unique opportunity for parents and children to connect around the central myth of Judaism — the exodus from Egypt," says Kaminsky.

The workshop is offered free of charge, although modest donations are welcome. Pre-registration is required. Call 724-266-5238

BASEBALL

Panthers warm up for 2005 season

By Jon Paul Creese

Sports editor

Sewickley Academy will face some new teams in their section this season after an alignment shake up.

And the boys look at it as more of an opportunity than a challenge.

"Western Beaver, Monaca and OLSH are not so good," explained Tim Yee, senior. "Union should be pretty good, though."

"We have a good chance of making the playoffs."

Yee was the Academy's star third baseman last year but is moving to short stop.

"Third is my strongest, but they're going to need me at short this year," he said.

Head coach Bill Holzworth said he moved Yee to short stop in order to solidify the Panther outfield.

"His knowledge of the game and what to do with the ball makes him a great player," Holzworth said. "I wanted a lead guy in that area to take control."

Holzworth has a few other strong seniors as well, including Paul Patek, second base, and Adam Wilberger, right field.

Patek replaced Wilberger at second this year and Holzworth said he is also one of the team's lead hitters.

"Adam is a very solid defensive player," Holzworth noted. "He is very smart with the ball."

He added that Wilberger is the perfect player to back up Patek at second.

Rotating on the mound this year are Luke Brocks, junior, and Mike Kalis, sophomore.

Senior Matt Palmer, who led the Academy Basketball team to the states in 2004, is on third and Zack Ciccone, junior, will cover center field.

Holzworth said the team has already overcome their biggest obstacle.

together and execute slides.

"On the attacking end, the goal is to have everybody be a threat, and not be afraid to run," she said. "If we get those two things down, we'll be successful."

As far as the Lady Panther plan of attack goes, Lozano, a midfielder known to make her way around the field, is easily the No. 1 threat.

"[Marisa] has tremendous athletic abilities," Lassen said. "She has a dominant left hand, strong shots ... an excellent attack player who plays aggressive defense."

"When she loses the ball ... she is hungry to get it back," she said, adding that Lozano has quick offensive moves and is a team player with a positive attitude.

"I expect her to take control of the draws and lead the offense."

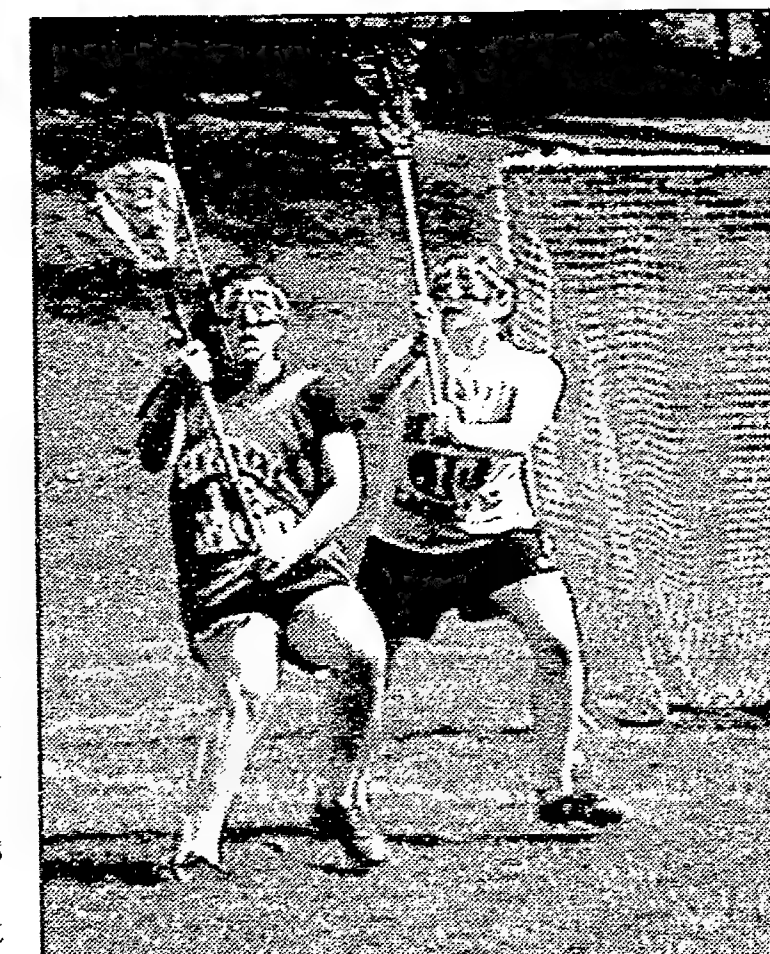

Laneburg, attack, is another big threat on offense.

"She's got a pretty hard shot," Lassen said. "I'm looking forward to her surprising people by putting the ball in the net."

O'Hara is the core of the Lady Panther's defense.

Lassen attributes "great endurance" to the midfielder and stressed her ability to run.

"Maggie can run for days," she said. "She can run the ball down."

"I expect her to take some leads on the defensive end and be a communicator."

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Fogel successful on and off of the baseball diamond

Senior hopes Highest Honors award will motivate younger teammates to excel

By Jon Paul Creese

Sports editor

Joe Fogel knows where his priorities lie -- in the classroom.

He makes no bones about it. "School is the No. 1 priority," he says. "Baseball comes second."

His philosophy has paid off. The Quaker Valley senior was named to the Western Pennsylvania Baseball Prospect's Highest Honor Roll, reserved for students who earn a 3.5 grade point average or higher and 1200 or above on SAT tests.

Fogel, whose favorite subject is math, made it by a long shot with a 4.18 GPA.

And, not only has his hard work paid off, it has rubbed off on his teammates.

For underclassmen, having role-models like seniors Fogel and teammate Adam Vish, who made High Honor Roll, can be motivational. Junior Matt McTiernan,

"School is my No. 1 priority, baseball comes second."

— Joe Fogel, QV senior who plays first base for the Quakers, also made the High Honor Roll, and others are not far behind.

"They are getting the idea that grades are most important," Fogel said of his underclassmen. "No one is a slacker in that area at all."

And judging by QV's performance last week, beating Cornell 10-2 and Quigley 11-1, no one is slacking on the field either.

Fogel plays catcher and short stop.

Joe Fogel

- School: Quaker Valley
- Class: Senior
- Sport: Baseball
- Accomplishment: Fogel made the Western Pennsylvania Baseball Prospect's Highest Honor Roll with a 4.18 grade point average and a score of 1200 on the SATs.

"I'm learning different positions," he said. "It's a continuing learning experience."

He says he doesn't have a favorite position, but that he likes to play wherever the team needs him most.

And that works out great for head coach Greg Vecchi, who refers to Fogel as his "utility man," a testament to his versatility.

"We can trust him to play any position on the field and play it well," Vecchi said.

Fogel plans to attend Mercyhurst College or Penn State and major in accounting.

He attributes his success in academics to time management skills and discipline he began to learn at St. James, which he attended until the eighth grade.

He predicts success for the team also.

"We're looking to make the playoffs and have a run at the section title," he said. "We know we can do it."

FOGEL HITS the batting cages at Quaker Valley as a junior. The Quakers "utility man" is playing catcher and covering short stop this year.

REAL ESTATE TODAY

No one likes thinking about taxes, but when you do, you probably don't want to think about real estate agents. But they're thinking about taxes and their affect on buyers and sellers. Most agents can't offer tax advice, but they are very attentive to local and national developments that could positively or adversely influence real estate transactions.

A Taxing Situation!

Betty Moraca
ABR, CRS, CFS, GRI

You may not be buying or selling right now, but you should be aware of the implications of new tax legislation that could possibly be enacted during George W. Bush's second term.

President Bush wants to make his tax cuts permanent and he is pushing for tax simplification. That usually means brining the old concepts of a "flat tax" or "national sales tax" out of the closet for consideration again.

It's impossible to say if either of those scenarios will play out, but we should keep our eye on popular tax deductions like mortgage interest. Bush clearly supports keeping that deduction, but anything can happen when the tax code is rewritten.

Although it's unlikely, the passage of a national sales tax could translate into taxation of rent payments or on the sale of real estate. This is why it's important for you and me to educate ourselves and let our local, state, and national representative know where we stand. A little knowledge could save you a lot of money!

DESIGN OF THE WEEK

Centralia style offers great family spaces

The Centralia's impressive size bespeaks stateliness and permanence, as do its corner quoins, keystone arches, brick facade, and multiple gables. Half-round windows and a copper-roofed dining room bay add grace.

This is a large home, boasting more than 3,500 square feet of living area, plus a huge bonus room and a three-car garage.

A plant shelf decorates the two-story entry. Plants glory in natural light spilling down through the arched window over the door.

Ahead, another plant shelf caps an arched opening that leads into a dramatic vaulted great room. Glass fills more than half of the rear wall, while a fireplace nestles between cabinetry that could house a home entertainment center or books and art.

A wide arch, flanked by columns, leads into the kitchen's bright eating nook. The kitchen easily accommodates multiple chefs. Notable features include a bay window, roomy pantry and work island.

From there, one passage-way leads to an elegant dining room with a tray ceiling and wide bay window. Another leads to a large utility room equipped with a pull-down ironing board, deep sink, long folding counter and a closet.

Large and luxurious, the master suite is the only bedroom on the main floor. The walk-in closet wraps around two sides of an octagonal bathroom with a spa tub, oversized shower, private toilet and dual vanity bay.

Upstairs, a huge loft or study overlooks the Centralia's vaulted great room, and each bedroom has its own bathroom.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Dept. W, Eugene, OR 97402. Specify the Centralia 30-164 and include a return address when ordering.

➤ Stress-Free Productivity

HOW TO MANAGE YOUR JOB

The secret to increasing your productivity may lie in your ability to relax, says personal productivity guru David Allen.

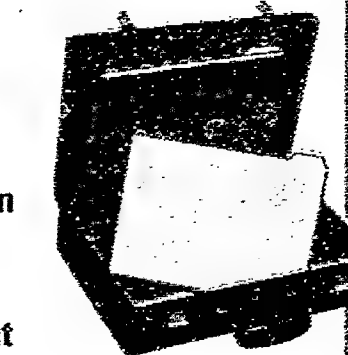

Only when your mind is clear and your thoughts are organized can you achieve effective results and unleash your creative potential, says Allen in his bestselling book, "Getting Things Done: The Art of Stress-Free Productivity" (Penguin, $14).

Allen has more than 20 years experience as a management consultant, executive coach and educator. The book details his deceptively simple guidelines for getting things done, which he has introduced at seminars across the country and at top organizations such as Microsoft, Lockheed and the U.S. Department of Justice. Also available from Penguin is Allen's new book, "Ready for Anything: 52 Productivity Principles for Work and Life."

From core principles to proven tricks, "Getting Things Done" has the potential to transform the way you work-and the way you experience work.

By setting priorities wisely and organizing work efficiently, it can be easier to relax and in turn become more productive.

At any level of implementation, Allen's entertaining and thought-provoking advice shows readers how to pick up the pace without wearing themselves down. Available at your local bookstores.

➤ Be Next Bake-Off Contest Millionaire

HOW TO MANAGE YOUR TIME

A hundred home cooks will compete for a $1 million grand prize and more at the Pillsbury Bake-Off® Contest finals, March 18-21, 2006, in Miami. The contest is now open for entries, so start creating your original recipe today. Entry deadline is May 31, 2005.

The 42nd competition features changes in recipe categories, prizes, eligible products and sponsors. For details and to enter online, visit www.pillsbury.com/bakeoff. You can also get an entry form by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Pillsbury Bake-Off Entry Form Request, P.O. Box 7200, Melville, NY 11775-7200.

This recipe earned Elizabeth Caulfield Felt, Stevens Point, Wis., a trip to the 41st contest. This hearty meat pie with a flaky pie crust is a recipe example that fits the Dinner Made Easy™ category.

CHEESY SAUSAGE PIE

- 1 lb. bulk pork sausage
- 1 medium onion, chopped (1/2 cup)
- 1 tablespoon minced garlic
- 1/2 cup tomato paste (from 6-oz. can)
- 1 cup Green Giant® Niblets® frozen corn (from 1-lb. bag)
- 1 can (14.5 oz.) diced tomatoes with Italian-style herbs, undrained
- 1 can (2.25 oz.) sliced ripe olives, drained
- 1 Pillsbury® refrigerated pie crust (from 15-oz. box), softened as directed on box
- 1 1/2 cups shredded Cheddar cheese (6 oz.)

Heat oven to 350°F. In 12-inch skillet, cook sausage, onion and garlic over medium heat, stirring frequently, until sausage is no longer pink. Drain, discarding any drippings. Stir in tomato paste, corn, tomatoes and olives.

Place pie crust in 9-inch glass pie pan as directed on box for One-Crust Filled Pie. Spoon sausage mixture into pie crust-lined pan. Bake 30 to 40 minutes or until crust is golden brown. Sprinkle cheese over top.

Bake 10 to 15 minutes longer or until cheese is melted and begins to brown. Let stand 10 minutes. Cut into wedges to serve. 8 servings.

High Altitude (3500-6500 ft.): Heat oven to 375°F. Prebake crust 8 minutes. After filling partially baked crust, bake pie 40 to 50 minutes. Sprinkle cheese over top; bake about 5 minutes.

➤ Spruce Up Your Home

HOW TO MANAGE YOUR HOME

It can be easy to spruce up your home-and keep costs from going through the roof. Try these tips:

WATER STAINS: If wet weather left its mark on your walls, follow these quick steps to repair the damage.

1. Where mold or mildew is present, kill and clean it with a mold-eliminating product found in most hardware or paint stores.
2. Prime your walls with an oil-based stain-blocking primer. Be aware, though, that not all primers are designed to be stain-blockers. KILZ Odorless primer can be a good choice for indoor projects. Not only does it have less of an odor than other options, it's also formulated to block tough stains including water marks, pet odors and nicotine.
3. Once your primer dries, add a fresh coat of color.

PAINTING TIPS: Few things can improve the looks of a home as dramatically as a new paint job. Here are some ideas from the experts.

- Don't Pass on the Primer. Most primers dry in an hour, but their benefits last for years. Plus, starting with a primed wall usually means you'll need fewer coats of topcoat paint. It can also help ensure your topcoat color matches your paint chip. Primers such as KILZ Odorless and KILZ 2 are designed to cover surfaces including wood, drywall and masonry.
- Add a Splash of Color. Ask your paint store to tint your primer with a color a few shades lighter than your topcoat color. That way, you won't need to use as much topcoat when you paint, which saves both time and money.
- Mix It Up. When you're painting a room that will require more than one gallon of topcoat paint, pour paint from each gallon into your painting tray. Because color can vary slightly from can to can, this ensures the color on your wall is uniform.
- Go Solo. If you're in a time pinch, select a topcoat paint such as KILZ Casual Colors, which guarantees one-coat coverage.
- Do the Math. A gallon of paint typically covers 300-350 sq. ft. on smooth surfaces and 200-300 sq. ft. on rough surfaces. Save time and money on painting projects by using paints that guarantee one-coat coverage.

HOW TO MANAGE YOUR CAR

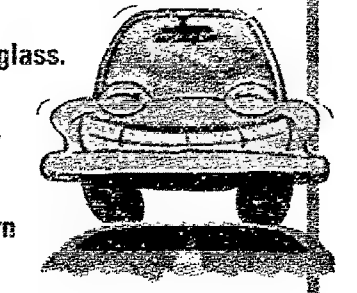

Maintaining and upgrading vehicle headlights is more than just a bright idea. It can be an inexpensive way to help keep you, your family and others safe.

The National Safety Council reports traffic deaths are three times more likely to occur at night than during the day. In addition, the University of Michigan Transportation Research Institute released a study showing that approximately 2,300 pedestrians are killed in the U.S. annually because of drivers' inability to see at night.

You can keep your headlights in good working order by following these easy tips:

- Two At A Time-Replace your headlights in pairs about once a year. It is a little known fact that halogen headlights don't just burn out; they dim over time. Replacing them in pairs helps avoid uneven illumination, which can diminish driving visibility.
- Bright Idea-Don't wait for your headlights to dim; upgrade your headlights. University research has shown that whiter halogen headlights, such as Sylvania SilverStar®, provide drivers with better roadside viewing, improved reaction time and increased visibility.
- Quick Clean-Give your headlights a quick scrub when washing your windshield at the gas station. This small task helps prevent glare, which can be intensified by dust and dirt on the glass.
- Make Adjustments-Ask your auto service person to check your headlight alignment. Headlights can be knocked out of alignment by rough driving, creating a distraction for other drivers.
- Quick Check-Periodically ask a friend to walk around the outside of your car while you turn on the headlights, brake lights and turn signals to confirm they're in good working order.

Remember, your lights are the only way you have to communicate with other drivers. For more information on headlight upgrades and to choose the right headlights to fit your car, visit www.sylvania.com.

A chance to do good —

(NAPSI)-Ancient philosophers said, "Every place there is justice, there is peace."

Now one legal organization is fighting for justice for all Americans.

The Equal Justice Works (formerly NAPIL) Fellowships Program was launched in 1992 to address the shortage of attorneys working on behalf of traditionally under-served populations and causes in the United States.

Each fellowship has three components:

- A carefully designed initiative that involves legal advocacy on behalf of individuals, groups or issues that are not adequately represented.

- Working on this initiative is a third-year law student, recent law graduate or experienced attorney with a demonstrated commitment to public interest law who has the relevant skills and initiative to carry out the goals of the project.

- Employment by a host organization, which provides training, supervision, benefits and other support.

For more information, including how to apply, go to www.equaljusticeworks.org.

You may be eligible for financial and technical support for innovative and effective legal projects.

Clean sweep your home with these tips

(NAPSI)-Cutting the clutter in your home doesn't have to be a chore. Try these tips from Peter Walsh. He is the organizer on the home organization series, "Clean Sweep" on TLC.

"Clean Sweep" airs Saturdays at 8 PM ET/PT.

Start slow.

Be realistic and don't try to organize everything in one day or one weekend.

Start small, one room or section of a room at a time.

Make a commitment every day to organize another part of your home until it's done.

Find a de-cluttering buddy.

An honest friend will help you put things in perspective and convince you to part with that neon jumpsuit from 1982.

Create a place for paperwork.

It's one of the biggest clutter issues in the home.

Have a filing system for bills, important files and magazines.

Also create permanent storage

Peter Walsh, on TLC's Clean Sweep helps homeowners battle against clutter.

Use the ratio rule.

For every four items you keep, throw away one.

Challenge yourself and try to lower the ratio to three to one or even two to one.

Understand and honor your treasured collections.

Items stored in a trash bag in the attic aren't collections.

Find a place to honor your keepsakes, otherwise consider getting rid of them.

Hold a neighborhood garage sale.

Turn trash into cash by selling the items you no longer need in your home. Consider donating the funds to charity.

Make your bed.

Your mother was right. Making your bed every day is an instant quick fix that makes rooms look neater.

Try the clothes hanger trick.

At the start of a season, reverse the way your clothes are hung in your closet. When you wear and return an item, replace the hanger the correct way around.

At the end of the season, you can clearly see what you haven't worn and, most likely, what you can live without.

Organize your monthly receipts.

Use an inexpensive 12-month accordion file to quickly and easily organize your monthly receipts and paid bills.

At the end of 12 months, discard the oldest bills and receipts.

Understand that it's not always about "the stuff."

Recognize that the clutter is often a reflection of something deeper that might be troubling you.

Dealing with the clutter can open up not only the physical space in your life but also your emotional, psychological and spiritual space as well.

For more information on "Clean Sweep" and Peter Walsh, visit www.discovery.com and click on TLC.

Fighting dust allergies

(NU) - Are you one of the millions of Americans who suffer from indoor allergies?

Do you wake up with sniffles, congestion or wheezing? A remedy may be more easily available than you imagined.

Thanks to a major innovation in the allergy market, help is now available in the form of a revolutionary new microfiber allergen barrier for your bed.

It is a microfiber that is completely unlike the vinyl or uncomfortable polyurethane covers which have made many allergy sufferers reluctant to cover their pillows or mattresses.

Using new fabric technology, this tightly-woven microfiber provides superior comfort, suppleness and breathability, yet it blocks dust mite allergen. What's it called? ACb Pristine 100.

Why do allergen barrier covers make such a difference? According to the National Institutes of Health, (called allergens) cause the most trouble for people with indoor allergies.

In even the cleanest of homes, these microscopic creatures live in mattresses, pillows and bedding; encase your bed to stop inhaling the allergens.

The soft and supple ACb Pristine 100 is the only Pristine barriers proven to be 100 percent effective at blocking dust mite allergens. It is the newest generation of allergen barriers from Allergy Control Products, Inc., a market leader in the allergy industry.

ACb Pristine 100 allows air as well as perspiration to pass through the microfiber barrier, giving it the breathability that other covers lack. With this new air porous microfiber, Allergy Control Products continues to add to its full line of exceptional products for the allergy sufferer.

— Value of preventive maintenance —

by Pat Goss
(NAPS)-If you want to save money down the road, take care of your auto now. It is estimated that every preventive maintenance dollar spent today can potentially save eight dollars in future repairs. Because cars of today are lasting longer and people are curbing their spending in a tight economy, it's important to make sure your car stays in top form by investing in preventive maintenance.

• Change Motor Oil (Check your owner's manual for specific manufacturer recommendations. Most recommend every three months or 3,000 miles)-Motor oil left in an engine too long can lead to deposit and sludge build-up in your engine, reducing your vehicle's performance and ultimately engine life. So, changing your oil regularly is important. If you haven't had regular oil changes in the past, or if you want to ensure your engine stays clean, there are new types of oil formulated to help keep engines cleaner, longer. For example, ExxonMobil makes a class of synthetic blend motor oils, called Mobil Drive Clean Plus, which help prevent deposit formation, safely clean away sludge, and restore engine performance.

• Rotate Tires (every 7,500 miles or every other oil change)-Tire rotation makes all four tires wear more evenly, leading to longer life. Regular rotation may double tire life.

• Change Fuel Filter (yearly or as needed)-Fuel filters tend to largely be overlooked leading to poor performance and possible damage to fuel system components.

• Check/Service Battery (yearly or as needed)-Take the battery out of a car and every part is rendered useless. Without a battery even the radio is mute. Clean, tight battery cable connections are vital to prevent costly and inconvenient electrical system malfunctions.

• Check/Service Air Conditioning (every spring)-As air conditioning is used some refrigerant is lost. Over time the lost refrigerant will be replaced with air and moisture-both of which are harmful to air conditioner parts. Yearly checks catch problems early to help prevent big repair bills.

For more information visit www.exxonmobil.com.

• Mr. Goss is a well-known and respected expert on car care and maintenance. Best-known for his role as co-host of the weekly television series "MotorWeek," his common sense approach has helped millions of car owners understand and have confidence in their cars.
